RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

The Red Cross campaign for funds started off recently with an appeal to all farmers who are grain growers for a donation of grain. This will be counted as membership subscription to the Society, and of the money raised 82% will be spent in our own province and 18% given for Japanese Relief.

In Alberta there is no service given by the Red Cross which makes a more direct appeal than the Rural Hospital and Nursing Service. It is of incalculable value to the settlers in outlying districts.

In those parts of the Province where the Government has not been able to establish Nursing Service, the Red Cross has operated seven Rural Hospitals, or Nursing Outposts, and has maintained District Nurses in some communities far removed from Hospital Service.

One hospital in the far north is situated one hundred miles from steel. Without the Red Cross there would be no provision for the care of the sick and much suffering and hardship would be endured by the settlers. Some features of this work are as follows:

Several Red Cross hospitals have been established and operated. One hundred and seventy-eight babies have been born in Red Cross institutions.

Fifteen thousand, nine hundred and thirteen hospital days have been listed.

First Aid Classes have been held, and Health Lectures have been given. Pre-natal, Child Welfare and other visits have been made to homes in the rural districts.

To continue and develop this work is the future policy of the Red Cross. To these worthy grounds, the Society appeals to everyone to support the forthcoming annual campaign and Membership Drive to raise funds for Red Cross Service.

CURING UNHAPPY MARRIAGES

A prominent doctor says: The day is coming when unhappy marriages will be dealt with in the consulting room and not in the Divorce Court. I am quite sure of this for within the last few years I have seen miracle after miracle performed whereby the utmost wretchedness was changed to love and reconciliation.

The truth is that when a man and woman who have cared for one another sufficiently to become husband and wife drift apart, one or other of them is suffering from a bodily ailment. This is not illness in the usual sense. It is, as a rule, a weakness of the "glands of life."

Let me give an example from my own experience. Some ten years ago a friend of mine married a beautiful girl. For a time they seemed the happiest couple in the world. But gradually happiness faded away. My friend became pale and anxious looking; his wife lost her good looks and developed instead a rasping voice and a whole host of grievances. Her face became rather swollen and her hair fell out. AMAZING REJUVENESCENCE But the worst trouble of all was her nervous complaining. From morning till night she went on finding fault and nagging until, at last, her husband could stand no more. They separated.

Shortly after that tragedy, the young wife consulted one of the greatest of English surgeons, a man who uses his brain more than his lancet. He found that a poison in her system had nearly destroyed her thyroid gland. So he prescribed a special course of "thyroid feeding" and, in addition, gave her some other gland essences.

What followed was truly the most amazing spectacle I have ever witnessed. The puffy cheeks grew firm and fine again. A luxuriant growth of hair took place and the lost roses returned to her complexion. Now she is the benefit stop there. This feeble, nagging woman became strong again in mind and in heart. Her troubles seemed to fall away from her.

Within six months she had become respectable. The puffy cheeks grew firm and fine again. A luxuriant growth of hair took place and the lost roses returned to her complexion. Now she is the benefit stop there. This feeble, nagging woman became strong again in mind and in heart. Her troubles seemed to fall away from her.

I do not, of course, mean to say that all unhappy marriages are of this kind; but I believe that many are, and I am convinced that, as our knowledge of the body and its wonderful construction increases, we shall more and more come to look upon ill-nature and depression as diseases which can be cured.

Good Nature and—Bad Health Excessive good nature, however, is not always a sign of health. One of the tallest men I ever knew was good natured to a fault. Unhappily, he never seemed to stop growing, and in addition, the bones of his face and hands became enormously large. Gradually it was seen that some illness was at work, and finally this illness was traced to a tiny gland which lies just below the brain, inside the skull. There is no more mysterious organ in the whole body than this one, which is called the pituitary.

If it overacts, immense fatness results, and most of the "giants" who are exhibited at village fairs are suffering in this way. They are getting too much of the essence of this gland. Dwarfs, on the other hand, are probably getting too little.

So far no one has attempted successfully to influence human height by means of the pituitary gland, but there is no special reason why this should not be done at some future time. The chief difficulty is that the gland is difficult to transplant.

The effects of this gland are often strange. For example, a very little of a certain part of it given to them in their food seems to make huns larger. Another part of this gland is much used by doctors in certain diseases of the stomach. As I have said, very tall people who suffer from too much pituitary are usually exceedingly good natured; too much thyroid, on the other hand, is well as too little, often gives rise to great irritability.

But the lesson is that it is the "balance" which counts. A perfectly healthy body is like a perfectly "tuned" and balanced instrument. If my friend became pale and anxious looking; his wife lost her good looks and developed instead a rasping voice and a whole host of grievances. Her face became rather swollen and her hair ness" in any direction is ill health. Naturally change will be most apt to occur in connection with strong emotions, which are severe tests even of a healthy man or woman.

Love is the strongest of all the emotions. That means that those who find their love growing cold without a good reason, or who are capricious and changeable, or who demand constant excitement as a "whip" for their spirits, are probably "run down." They are asking too much of their glands.

A great American doctor, who studied the emotions of soldiers during the war, discovered that the power to stand the strain of battle was a "gland power." If a man has enough of these gland essences—thyroid, pituitary, adrenal—their "fighting team"—brave, cool, strong. If he has too little, or if the balance is upset, the strain "breaks him." He becomes a nervous wreck.

The Crippled in Character It is the same with all other emotions—love, sorrow, worry. Doctors are coming to apply this knowledge, and a new kind of medicine is being developed. The great future of this art of healing is likely to be no one at present can guess.

One thing is certain, however, and that is to be kinder to the "failure" and the weak character. For these people are the ones who are the backbone of a nation. They are the ones who are the backbone of a nation. They are the ones who are the backbone of a nation.

Our world to-day is full of crippled minds. They are the ones who are the backbone of a nation. They are the ones who are the backbone of a nation. They are the ones who are the backbone of a nation.

year from the date of filing the caveat. The Minister suggested that, in view of the prevailing crop, harvest and market conditions, the time of issuing the transfers to the Municipality be extended to the first day of December. The suggestion of the Minister met with the entire approval of the Council.

Moved by Rogers "that transfer to this Municipality of lands subject to 1922 caveat be not issued by the Treasurer before the first day of December, 1923." Carried.

The Deputy Minister advised under date September 17 that the application of Mrs. J. C. Ensign as auditor for this Municipality for 1923 was duly approved by the Department.

G. A. Thibault, secretary of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners, wrote enclosing copy of Order of the Council, No. 2457, dated September 17, cancelling Plan 2877 A.L. Woodlands, and vesting the title in the name of the City of Red Deer.

C. E. Hope, tax agent C.P.R.; James McGuire of the Associated Mortgage Co. and T. W. Swanson, manager of the Trusts & Guarantee Co., all of Calgary, wrote asking if the time for taking title under the Tax Recovery Act regarding lands in caveat list 1922 be postponed until the Council meeting extended to December 1, as suggested by the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

The Registrar, Land Titles Office, advised that caveat against N.W. 27-3-5 was discharged on August 30, 1923. The Registrar, Mrs. Archibald, opened from a damage claim of $5, which was paid under protest to Geo. E. Wood, poundkeeper, on a note of $100. The mare had been impounded by Mr. Heyward, who claimed that damages to that amount had been paid. The mare trespassing on his property on September 8. As it was not possible for the Council at this date to investigate and discover the damage committed, the secretary was instructed, on motion by Stringer, to write to the poundkeeper and get from him full particulars of the claim of damages made by Heyward, when impounding the mare, and the appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald was laid over to be dealt with on receipt of the required information.

Moved by Stringer "that all poundkeepers in the Municipality be instructed that when any claim for damages is paid under protest, that the secretary be informed at once of all the particulars of the claim, of which claim is made, and also that the same information should be given to the Council of the Division in which the pound is located." Carried.

W. J. Jackson, secretary of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts, wrote advising that the dates of the annual convention for the present year would be October 31 and November 1 and 2, at Edmonton, in the Memorial Hall. It was pointed out by Mr. Jackson that the current year's dues of $20 would be paid by the entire council to representation at the convention. After considerable discussion, the Council as to the merits and demerits of the Association, it was moved by Councillor Isaacson, who was in favor of the convention, "that this Council pay the necessary fee of $20, and be represented at the convention this year." Motion carried.

Councillors Brathwaite, Beeson, Smith and Isaacson voting for; Reeve Rogers and Stringer against.

Councillor Stringer was nominated by Isaacson as a delegate to the convention and was urged by the Council to accept, but refused on account of his health not being very satisfactory. On nomination by Stringer, Councillor Isaacson was appointed a delegate with the unanimous support of the Council.

P. K. Johnson, poundkeeper of Div. No. 2, wrote on September 4 advising of a two-year-old bull which had been impounded and advertised for sale on September 3, when he had no bidders, and the bull was not sold. The total charges against the bull were $24.75. The Council approved, on motion by Rogers of the poundkeeper's claim for the bull, and the charges against him at the present time.

R. D. Archibald's claim for damages of $10 on account of a stallion impounded on June 21, was not allowed. Moved by Councillor Rogers "that it be agreeable to this Council that, in co-operation with the Council of the Village of Sylvan Lake, that electric lights be installed in the Municipal building at a cost of a meter be provided." Carried.

Pound receipts were received as follows from Geo. E. Wood: $13.25, $35.25, and $150.

The following bills and paychecks were presented, found to be correct, and passed for payment: Divisions 1, F. K. Johnson, pound account, $13.50;

OBJECTABLE LEGISLATION

The question of objectionable legislation was discussed in a recent issue of the Monetary Times, and this well known journal points out the unfortunate state of this province in this regard. While we have a Farmer government, and it may be assumed legislation placed on the statute book is in the interest of the farmer, as a matter of fact the farmer will eventually be the greatest sufferer by this legislation. The article in question is as follows:

"The province of Alberta presents a striking illustration of objectionable legislation and in whose interest it was passed seems difficult to determine. During series of bad seasons in certain parts of the province, the farmers were unable to meet their obligations, and in fact were assisted by the government in the way of seed grain, fodder, etc. Obviously in such conditions they could not pay their taxes and their creditors were willing to wait for the return of better conditions. Mortgage companies carried their accounts for several years without payment, and in fact whatever and moreover were compelled to pay insurance premiums and taxes to protect their properties. When these conditions were at their worst in 1922, the legislature of Alberta passed a tax recovery act which enabled the municipal districts to expropriate the land by a simple process of registering a caveat seven months after the taxes fell into arrears and complete the expropriation of the land about 14 months after the taxes were due. The act was passed without any notice whatever to mortgagees or others who might have an interest in the land—it would almost appear like an endeavor to acquire the land rather than to raise taxes. There are many thousands of farmers in Alberta affected by this act, the operation of which would dispossess many deserving men of their homes and render life lands now cultivated. This at a time when efforts are being put forth to fill up the west with good settlers."

"Another amazing aspect of taxation methods is manifested in the charges against the land which, if not paid, are collectible like taxes and therefore become a charge prior to an existing first mortgage. A recent tax bill for 1922 had charged against a quarter section, $383.00. On investigation it was found that the ordinary municipal and school taxes, etc., amounted to $56.30, and the remaining $327.00 covered an amount paid by the municipal district for the care of the taxpayer in a sanatorium for 109 days at $3 per day, and the farmer not paying the mortgages may be obliged to do so in order to prevent confiscation of his security by the municipality. The premium on municipal land insurance is also in some cases a heavy charge, like, like taxes having priority existing mortgages."

"The foregoing serves to illustrate a serious situation which legislators should give prompt attention if they wish to maintain the integrity of western securities. It would be a great pity if the future of the western provinces should be impaired through the withdrawal of the necessary capital for its upbuilding and extension. It is hoped the mistakes of the past will now be speedily recognized and a sincere attempt made to remove the objectionable laws and recover the confidence of the financial interests in the great west."

THE IMPERIAL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

The Imperial Economic Conference, meeting in London, has a wide range of subjects to deal with. The extent, resources and population of the Empire are so vast that they must present an almost insuperable array of questions for consideration. For us in Western Canada there are two great economic problems—the obtaining and settlement of new inhabitants and the efficient marketing of our produce. The first calls for a comprehensive immigration scheme, the second for a more efficient marketing of the grain which is the lifeblood of the Empire. The government is not on joint defensive schemes, but on the need for economy and the lack of any present danger calling for military or naval preparation. It is difficult to believe that that policy is a shortsighted, self-centred and mistaken one, unworthy of a dominion which played so honourable a part in the late war, but for the moment it is possible only to recognize that it is a mistake and to consider what its outcome may be. It seems that an acute difference may arise at the Conference between the two dominions which so far as defence is concerned is likely to be only to the detriment of the Empire. A general scheme of imperial defence, Australia, New Zealand and Great Britain will have to concert their own scheme without Canadian help, and Canada must go on relying on the generosity of Great Britain and the patronage of the United States for her protection, but the conflict of defensive policies may have an effect in another direction also. Australia is a protectionist, and in her trade policy. Her political parties, including the strong labour influence, are protectionist in their tendencies. A policy of protection at home in Australia is likely to suggest a policy of protection for the Empire; a general trade arrangement to promote inter-imperial trade rather than indiscriminate world trade. Again this conflicts with certain tendencies of the present Canadian government, which is a free trader. As it were, between the Conservatives and the Farmers or Progressives as regards free trade. The reaction from the Australian policy is likely to give an added stimulus to the policy of protection in the Empire. The Canadian government is clearly banking, and which may well be, to counter the dominant issue in our domestic politics at no distant date. It is therefore not surprising that to watch the proceedings of the Imperial Conference closely, so far as they are made public, since results may arise from it of direct and immediate interest to everyone in Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The W.C.T.U. were in session last week in this city. It is a pity that, bearing the name they do, they are not more temperate in their own conduct. Intemperance has probably caused more great tragedies than intemperance in drinking.

According to the W.C.T.U., when the Honorable Mr. Justice Beck of the Supreme Court, C. P. P. Conynbare, K. C., one of Alberta's leading and most respected lawyers, Mrs. Bishop, probably the cleverest woman in the province, and thousands of others we can name, profess that they are moderate abstemious, they are only fooling the people and are really the liquor interests. This is what we mean by intemperance in speech.

We were taught in school that the Canadian Banking system was the safest in the world. We believed it at the time, having no reason to do otherwise, but late our belief has been shaken. It is a disgrace and a tragedy that occurrences like that of the Home Bank can take place. The people who will suffer most are the small investors, while government deposits are a preferred class of assets. And no one will deny that the government is a great deal to blame for the tragedy.

It has always seemed to us that if every chartered bank in the Dominion were compelled to stand in the position of a guarantor of the liabilities of each other bank, and especially of the liabilities of the depositors, then bank failures would never occur. Losing banks would be absorbed before the crash came. And if there by any chance was a failure it would cause no suffering.

The Vancouver Observer comments editorially that as a critic Melchior has no equal in Canada, but that as a statesman he might be better. We think with all deference to the opinion of the editor of the Observer that he is confusing a "statesman" with a "politician." Melchior as a politician cannot compete with King. He is hampered by his high sense of right in that he feels that he must practice what he preaches. Before the election King and his supporters had one speech for the east and the other opposite for the west—two platforms on which to claim support, and they have lived up to neither.

Big yields of grain are so common that it is no longer fair to the public to make special comment of isolated cases. It appears that the only fault with any of the forecasts as far as Alberta is concerned is that they were too small.

We cannot help expressing our appreciation of the kindly mention given us in the Edmonton Journal of October 5th. To be referred to as one of the always faithful weekly newspapers is a compliment we try to earn, and one that is therefore all the more pleasant to get.

The Choral Society are holding their regular meeting on next Monday night in the Assembly Hall. It is hoped that a large number of old and new members will be on hand, and that they will make some sacrifice during the season to keep up the better standard of the society which has been set in the past. There is hardly a citizen who would not, if asked, say that he or she is anxious to serve the community and their fellow citizens to the best of their ability. Here is the opportunity. Good music, well rendered, has a value, cultural and educational, in a community, and the Choral Society is the best means of presenting the music to the people.

Population and markets are the most important questions facing the people of the West at the present time. These should receive the greatest attention by the Canadian delegates to the Imperial Economic Conference in session at the present time.

THE WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW

SOME SUGGESTED REFORMS

(By Our Lady Contributor)

I was talking the other day to a girl friend of mine, recently married, who asked me what I would have my way if it was customary for married women to wear a wedding ring, while married men rarely do so. I explained to her that at the wedding ring was the symbol of bondage, and indicated that a wife was bound to obey her husband in all things. My friend was most indignant at the idea and declared that it was a relic of the dark ages of mankind. She herself, she said, never thought of obeying her husband in anything, unless she felt inclined to, and he knew better than to try to make her do so. She even suggested that if there was to be any question of bondage as between husband and wife, it was the husband who ought to wear the ring and in her momentary irritation she went so far as to indicate that some husbands ought to wear the ring in their nose.

I deprecated my young friend's excessive fervor, but when she went on to suggest that married men wear some symbol of the fact just as a girl does, something that might be a mark of warning to other men, it was to fair husband-seekers, like the notice we saw on some farms, "No hunting allowed here!" It is to be expected that a girl should not be put to the expense of giving her fiancé an engagement ring, the obvious answer is that the symbol need not be a ring. A broad arrow embrodered on the sleeve of his coat or a small shell and cross bones worn as a button in the lapel of his jacket, or any such simple and yet solemn token, would serve just as well. I myself should go so far as to make it legally obligatory for married men to wear such a mark, and other symbols, so that they might be known as such at once. We all of us, have met men who are quite capable of concealing or denying the fact of their marriage in order to enjoy the pleasures of the single life. It is perhaps a discovery the truth only after she has allowed her affections to be engaged by the married traitor. For the same reason there ought to be a difference between the mode of addressing an unmarried man and one employed towards a married one. At present both are called "Mr.," whereas the girl who is "Miss" before her marriage becomes "Mrs. Y." the moment the marriage is over. I do not quite know what the difference in title between the bachelor and the married man should be. Perhaps the bachelor might retain his present commonplace title of "Mr.," while the married man should be addressed as "Squire," this graceful and dignified Spanish title. The change in title might even be an inducement to some men to avoid the plunge into the sea of matrimony instead of lingering shivering on the brink of matrimony. If it is suggested that no man would incur such risks and face such troubles for the mere sake of a title, one has only to consider the number of girls who marry the most deplorable looking male objects simply in order to be called "Lady This" or "The Duchess of That."

There is a further reform which ought to be made in the marriage law. As things now are, a girl on her marriage becomes a legal widow of her own, wholly dependent on the capricious goodwill of her husband for every cent of her money. As things now are, a girl on her marriage becomes a legal widow of her own, wholly dependent on the capricious goodwill of her husband for every cent of her money. As things now are, a girl on her marriage becomes a legal widow of her own, wholly dependent on the capricious goodwill of her husband for every cent of her money.

The Veauville Observer comments editorially that as a critic Melchior has no equal in Canada, but that as a statesman he might be better. We think with all deference to the opinion of the editor of the Observer that he is confusing a "statesman" with a "politician." Melchior as a politician cannot compete with King. He is hampered by his high sense of right in that he feels that he must practice what he preaches. Before the election King and his supporters had one speech for the east and the other opposite for the west—two platforms on which to claim support, and they have lived up to neither.

they are asked to provide a regular allowance for their wives. They think they are doing all that is necessary if they pay the household bills each month, (after first complaining of the extravagantly large amount of them) and very occasionally allow themselves to be flattered and wheedled into consenting to pay for clothes for the wife who works and earns every day to give them the home comforts they would have to pay handsomely for if she were not married. They are clear off at any time and leave them. I have often heard men say that whatever their faults may be compared with women, they are far more generous. If so, male generosity is strikingly unlike charity, which begins at home, for the former usually ends when home is reached. I hope any man so severe on the husband class in these remarks, but I really think it is time someone spoke out boldly and frankly on this subject. There ought to be a recognized salary for wives who act as housekeepers. It should be legally enforceable against their husbands, and measures should be taken to see that it is paid without the wife being compelled to call in the aid of law courts to get it. Naturally those who have the means to support a wife as a housekeeper, should have an equivalent right of refusing to support a wife who is not a housekeeper. The fact of the matter is that the whole question of husband and wife is one of the most important of the day. There is still too much of the old slave relationship about it. It is time that we should have a new relationship, one of partnership. We need not expect any improvement unless we women all insist on a right just as we demand and obtained the vote. Men are not altruistic enough to give up any advantage they have without less they are compelled to do so. We ought all of us to set about the compelling process without delay.

Canada's Standard Smoke

THE PISTOL "PINCHER"

By Fred Copeland

"A six-gun" plumped modestly on the hotel bed. Steve Lovell dug again into his postcard suitcase and was rewarded by the end of a gray sock, which he dragged out and held up side down. A second "six-gun" identical with the first fell with a muffled thud on the bed. They were big guns, those two, not the old single-action forty-fives of the cattle days, but single-action Russian four-fours, target guns and almost as old as the forty-fives. And both took the super accurate forty-four caliber special cartridge.

"Tomorrow one, perhaps both, of those guns would pound viciously upward with the sting of their heavy loads. At any rate eleven o'clock the next morning saw Steve on foot three miles north of Cheyenne. Both of the guns were hanging under his coat with their muzzles shoved down through holes in his hip pockets. Indians adorned in all the savage splendor of the seventies and mounted on holdly marked pines passed him. And this was July, 1917!

Steve turned eastward toward three huge grand stands. In a quarter of an hour he was in the crush of one of the annual crowds of Frontier Days at Cheyenne. He scrutinized faces as he worked his way to the entrance of the main grand stand. Suddenly he began elbowing his way toward a heavily built man with a white beard and gray eyes.

"Could you tell a feller where he could enter for the six-gun, even?" inquired Steve examining keenly a silver star half hidden behind the man's coat.

Without changing a line of his expression, the older man ran a calculating eye over Steve's lean frame and freckled face. "There ain't none," he replied deliberately. "It's all right and rotten since I've been here from Vermont to see this here Frontier Days show, and I figured to take a hand in the shooting events."

Steve gave the man a quick look of astonishment. "No six-gun work?" he asked. "I came clear out here from Vermont to see this here Frontier Days show, and I figured to take a hand in the shooting events."

Steve was justified this way and that as he talked. Of a sudden his hand went down behind his coat on the right side. A familiar weight was missing. He turned instantly. His Perfection is the aim of the Commercial Cafe, Restaurant and Ice Cream Parlors.

The premises are laid out with that end in view, and all employees are instructed to make this the main consideration.

The administration is based on efficiency and economy, and the saving is passed on to the customer.

The needs of our customers are met with service and courtesy.

spoke crisply, then turned and hurried away into the crowd, leaving Steve with a lone sympathizing member of the little group that had been listening to the conversation.

"My name's Rim Yates," said the fellow, "and I'd be proud to hear in for a couple of days' hunt. If you was aiming for action and could manage to split with half the reward."

Steve lifted a Yankee eyebrow and examined Rim Yates from his yellow hair to his ancient but carefully dressed cow-puncher's boots. It was a long way from Rim Yates' headgear to the necktie that he wore. He seemed to be a fellow who was keen and capable, and he replied that two on the trail would be better than one.

They spread the better than one on the crowd at the arena and two hours on the crowded streets of Cheyenne. But Omaha Joe seemed to have left the earth. Then Rim Yates suddenly suggested Sagoah, a new oil camp two days' ride north. He said he thought that Omaha Joe had found himself too closely watched in Cheyenne and had come to the oil camp, where he might work with great ease of mind. Rim said that if they could get the hook and everything went well, they could get the Deer Detective to go to look for him. Steve agreed to go to Sagoah and there take Omaha Joe off their hands.

The thing pulled at Steve's heart. He was a bird with strong wings and adventures especially so to those of the honest kind. At this point of the night they mounted their pair of hired horses in a creek valley. Rim built a small camp fire for company and the two men sat and examined Steve's forty-four target gun while Steve watched a tiny flame flicker in the darkness and a cow-puncher's stick.

"Remember," Rim said abruptly, still examining the gun, "of hearing an old-timer say, 'Don't never put a gun under you see it clear through. If we run into that kind of a crowd, it's no fun to play. I'd leave this gun in my pants, if I was you.'"

Steve's gaze instantly shifted from the fire to the peak of Rim's head, where a bright white cowlick, even at this late hour, was still visible. "There wasn't over a better barrel than the one on that gun, un," Rim had said the night before. "That was pinched off by me 'by that crook."

"Ain't complaints about the barrel, and she's big enough for business," Steve said. "But this sure is a queer gun. It's got the trigger hammer in the wrong place. You've got to have the hammer back when a gun comes out. Rim had laid the gun down. Suddenly another gun appeared in his hand; it had come from his right boot.

Steve looked at it with his mouth half open. He recognized it at once for an old single-action forty-four. "You can't do that with this here gun of yours," said Rim, smiling. "There ain't no hammer to pull."

"I think I can get her cocked some way," Steve said slowly, and he pulled his gun over to him and wrapped it up in an old raincoat.

The next morning, unused to the ground and the light, keen air of the mile-high altitude of the plains, Steve stirred uneasily and awoke. It was already light, and instinctively his gaze sought out the sleeping form of Rim Yates. Suddenly Steve sat up and peered keenly at the sleeping figure. One of Rim's stockings feet was pulled free of the blanket, and slightly behind it was the heavy mottled coil of a rattlesnake.

Even as Steve stared at the foot moved off it, and a faint, warning buzz came from the half-chilled snake. When Rim stirred and saw Steve looking at him, he said, "You're awake. A numbing silver shot through Steve as the man made a sudden unconscious movement. Instantly he dug down into his old raincoat and brought up his forty-four. With experienced smoothness he cocked the black snout of the gun for a safe angle. The snake barely showed beyond Rim's foot, and Steve did not dare to rise for a more open shot. It was a full minute before the weapon settled to stony stillness. Rim's foot moved uneasily as if shrinking from a dilemma either of which would mean as sharp a death.

The stinging blast of the heavy forty-four target cartridge brought the sleeper to a dazed sitting posture. As he caught sight of the writhing object at his feet he stiffened and reached cautiously for one of his boots.

"I got him all right; his head's gone," yelled Steve. "I'm here!"

Rim snapped his knees up under his chin while his eyes suspiciously regarded the snake and then he laid it in Steve's hand. He studied the gun a moment, got up and, coming over to Steve, shoved one hand with the withered thumb. "I ran my hand down a prairie-dog hole once, and a rattler hooked onto it. I pretty near didn't get over it. And I'm thankful you for what you just did."

"I don't need no medicine," said Steve.

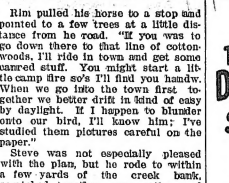

"I reckon I've got to ask you one favor," went on Rim, staring at him with a withered thumb thoughtfully. "We'll probably run onto this crook, Omaha Joe, together, and before you get to pull any gun I'm asking for you to wait till I sit down."

"Sit down?" Steve looked at Rim in wonder. "Are you afraid I'll mess it up and plug you by accident?"

"Nope. I'm just naturally cautious. We meet up with this crook, I want to sit down."

Every frown on Steve's face seemed to radiate curiosity, but he agreed to Rim's request.

At the end of the day they were riding side by side slowly into the twilight. The tips of the front fenders of the Rockies were shimmering deep purple against a far sea of clouds glowing like wind-drenched sails on its western rim. Shortly after sundown they mounted a small and of the range, and the part-back, part-avenue town of Sagoah lay upon them.

Rim pulled his horse to a stop and pointed to a few trees at a little distance from the road. "If you was to go down there to that line of cottonwoods, I'll ride in town and get some more. You might start a little camp fire so I'll find you handy. When we go into the town first, to see how we best drift in. I'll go by daylight. If I happen to blunder onto our bird, I'll know him; I've studied them pictures careful on the paper."

Steve was not especially pleased with the plan, but he rode to within a few yards of the cottonwoods, scratched together some cottonwood sticks and made a small fire. It seemed an unendingly long time to Steve as he waited for Rim to the spot Steve had chosen.

"See anything?" asked Steve eagerly as Rim came up.

"I sure did. I've dallying with the pastboards in a little game right back of the room where I bought this coat," Rim said.

Steve jumped to his feet, hardly able to believe his ears.

"Now take this advice and lay quiet tonight," said Rim slowly. "You ain't expecting anything."

After they had eaten and the fire burned brightly, Steve rolled sleepily into a blanket. He watched Rim as he sat in the faint moonlight in the darkness behind him. He saw him through his yellow hair and his hand through his yellow hair and his hand through his yellow hair.

Steve jumped to his feet, hardly able to believe his ears.

Sometimes in the night he stirred uneasily, as if he were aware of his surroundings. A late moon was sprinkling the road with a light that made the larger cottonwoods and the smaller ones look like a forest of giant sentinels. Steve jumped to his feet, hardly able to believe his ears.

"Now take this advice and lay quiet tonight," said Rim slowly. "You ain't expecting anything."

HAYNES

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lawton and family have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of their little girl, Freda, after a brief illness of a day or so. The funeral was conducted from the home of her mother, Mrs. Victor Hoppus, 1001 Avenue 22, on Tuesday, September 26, by Mr. Irish, and beside the gathering at the house, a number from Stone's district gathered at the grave including Little Freda's teacher and schoolmates. Among the beautiful flowers was a wreath of autumn leaves made by the children of Stone's school for their playmate. Beside her sorrowing parents, she was two brothers, Victor and Merrill, and two sisters, Zillah coming up from Cranston, and Mrs. Hoppus had taken the child into Lacombe, but she died soon after reaching town.

Mrs. Daly's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson, are stopping a few days on their wedding trip all the way from Nova Scotia. Mr. Daly's sister returned to Edmonton Tuesday after stopping off a few days after baby Isabel's funeral. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richardson have a young son.

Algie Sazo has closed the blacksmith shop while he goes thrashing with his brother.

DOGS NAME

"Who fiddled while Rome burned?" asked the school teacher.

"Hector, sir."

"No," said the school teacher.

"Tower, sir."

"Tower? What do you mean?" it was Nero.

"Well, sir, I knew it was somebody with a dog's name."

ECKVILLE

October 1, 1923
Fall is here and the poplar trees are putting their leaves on.
The Foresters' aeroplane was here several days last week. They have been engaged in taking aerial pictures of the country east of here.
The Municipal Council met on Saturday, September 22, at Eckville, and their next meeting will be in Bentley on October 27. The November meeting will also be here at Eckville on Friday, the 20th, and the secretary, Mr. Evernden, will stay over the day following, which is Saturday, for the convenience of the taxpayers in this neighborhood to have a chance of straightening up their taxes and get proper credit for work done.

Our telephone operator, Miss Thressa Botten, is making a request to all our good people who are using the central, to call by number instead, as has mostly been done up to now, by name only. Anyone who has the slightest knowledge of operating a central where a lot of rural calls are handled, knows how much easier it is for the operator to give quick and efficient service when getting the number, as by doing so the operator, being acquainted with the standard code used everywhere, can call the person desired at the very moment, as the number which you give coincides with the code ring which you are calling.

A few of our people have been in to Red Deer attending meetings of Dr. Price. One of our residents went with the hope of having a lifelong affliction cured, but apparently the good and wise doctor did not want to risk his reputation on the case in question, as she was told that he would not undertake the matter.

All the grain crop is now cut and in shocks, and wherever you look a bewitching panorama of grain put up in stacks meets your eyes. This has by quite a bit been the heaviest harvest on record. Not a few got caught in the storm a week ago, and consequently their remaining uncut grain lodged down, necessitating cutting only one way, which also had been done with a big percentage from earlier storms.
The help this season has been very scarce. We have seen farmers searching the trains going through for help, and station agents and people of all professions have helped in many ways. Our schoolmaster, Mr. Henry Ludwig, has been out in the harvest field after school hours, working up an appetite for the evening meal. Many of the threshing outfits started out today. A Condit syndicate are going to run the outfit Matt Johnson had last fall, and Mr. Julius Johnson, from the Blindman, is coming to this district to thresh. All this, in addition to our local threshers, Messrs. Thorsman, Langer Bros., P. Koot, H. Talon, A. B. Noeki, and others.

commercial investments, were not borne out by trade statistics. These showed that for the year ending August 31 last Canada had a foreign trade of $1,231,000,000 in excess of the previous year, with a balance on the right side, exports exceeding imports by $107,000,000.
In 1914 there was an adverse balance of trade. Canada imported $132,000,000 more than she exported, while during the past year the reverse was the case.

CANADIAN NATIONAL OPENS ONE OF WORLD'S LARGEST RAILWAY YARDS FOR GRAIN

Some idea of the extent of the new terminal opened at Fort William this fall by the Canadian National Railways is given by the above pictures, showing part of the 43 miles trackage with capacity for 2,000 cars. This new terminal is doing much to minimize the possibility of grain car congestion on Canadian National lines at the head of the lakes; expedite delivery of grain to elevators for shipment down the lakes and also the movement of other "loads" and "empties" both east and west and thus further improve the transportation service provided. Views shown are as follows:

- 1—Classification yard looking eastward from the "hump."
- 2—Twenty-four stall round-house with electrically operated turntable in the foreground.
- 3—View from center of the classification yard, showing car coming from "hump."
- 4—Eight and one-half million bushel elevator at Port Arthur, owned by Canadian National Railways, the picture showing grain going into elevator from cars at one end and being loaded on boat at the other.
- 5—"The hump," where the force of gravity is the only power used in placing cars in the classification tracks assigned to them. Two cars have just been released and are shown on their way to classification yard.

CONDITIONS IN DOMINION RIPE FOR INCREASED IMMIGRATION

Hon. J. A. Robb Sounds Optimistic Note Regarding Needs of Canada

Montreal, October 4.—While in his judgment conditions in Canada were ripe for a greatly increased immigration, Hon. J. A. Robb must see to it that this increased immigration is comprised of people who will fit into the nation's life, and maintain standards of living and civilization such as we have in Canada today," declared Hon. James A. Robb, minister of immigration, addressing the chambre de commerce here yesterday.
"It seems to me," Mr. Robb continued, that it would help all Canada, Montreal, the Atlantic ports, and the Pacific ports, and our railways, if we determined that new conditions in Canada are fairly good, and improving in the old world, we determined to open the doors for a wider influx of immigration. In my judgment, that is what is required to bring greater prosperity to Canada."

Population Needed

Mr. Robb said that if he interpreted the ideas of the Canadian people correctly, their great desire in every city, town, village, and in the country districts, was for more population by immigration. The question was how to secure this increased immigration and, at the same time, maintain our standard of living and citizenship.
The first thing to do, said Mr. Robb, was to make life in Canada so attractive and prosperous that her own people would stay here. "We have considerable debt, but I submit to you, as business men, is there any country in the world that participated as we did in the great war? Freedom that has recovered more rapidly than has Canada?" he asked.

Canadian Creditors
The manner in which conditions have changed was shown by the fact that today 80 percent of Canada's public debt was held by the people of Canada, so that the interest was paid in Canada and remained in circulation here.

NO BLOCKADE OF GRAIN ON LAKES

Winnipeg Reports Prompted by Ulterior Motives, Says D'Arcy Scott

Ottawa, October 4.—D'Arcy Scott, chief counsel of the Royal Grain Inquiry Commission, has returned from Winnipeg. Mr. Scott says that the grain is now freely moving to the head of the lakes. About 2,000 cars are inspected daily at Winnipeg. There are no indications of any serious blockade at Port William and Mr. Scott is satisfied that the government, through the board of grain commissioners, has the matter well in hand. The reports from Winnipeg that a blockade is imminent at Port William are evidently prompted by ulterior motives, he added.

Mr. Scott is much impressed with the western route to Vancouver and other Pacific ports, and believes that a very large portion of the grain and some of the Saskatchewan grain will go westward this year.
It is also expected that the transcontinental line to Quebec will be utilized as an additional outlet for this year's magnificent crop.

FULLY CONSCIOUS; STOMACH REMOVED

Buffalo, N.Y., October 4.—Chaffing from time to time with the man on the operating table, Dr. Hans Finster, of the University of Vienna, yesterday removed the patient's stomach, performed a minor operation on the organ, and replaced it. The operation required nearly two hours, the patient being fully conscious throughout.
Dr. Finster explained that special treatment of the solar plexus, deadening the nerve centres, had made unnecessary the use of anaesthetics. Physicians examining the patient said he had suffered none of the after-effects of shocks usual on the operations.

Order Coal NOW

One of these early days we'll wake up to find snow drifting round the corners; house cold as charity, and not a lump of coal in the bin. Then everyone will want fuel at once—but someone is going to go short—

WILL IT BE YOU?

Be wise, beat the weather to it and order coal today. Make sure of being warm and comfortable, even if it does set in cold this week. Our coals are all the very best quality, satisfaction guaranteed.

THE LOCAL RED CROSS NEEDS YOUR ASSISTANCE

A very needy case has been brought to our notice, and we are appealing to the people of this district for donations of secondhand clothing. We would be glad of clothing for boys ranging from 5 to 15 years, and for small girls around the age of 6, as well as any women's or men's clothing. This is the first case of need in our district reported to us this year, and we are depending on the generosity of the people in this area to see that the necessary clothing is supplied. The case has been investigated and is a very deserving one, so anything you can spare will be greatly appreciated. Everyone knows of the splendid work the Red Cross Society is doing where relief is needed, and this is your chance to show you are willing to help with any local relief work which may come up. Kindly leave any donations with the Secretary, Mrs. J. Holmes, No. 7, Sanders Block (over Loves Grocery). Thank you.

WORLD'S RECORD BROKEN

Regina, October 6.—The world's record for levitation grain trains was shattered by the C.P.R. yesterday.

One mile in length, a monster train of 125 carsloads of wheat was operated over the line between Stoughton and Arcola.

The contents of the cars weighed 2380 tons, made a total weight hauled by a single engine of 7946 tons. The great string of cars contained approximately 135,000 bushels of grain.

NEW GRAIN BUYING FIRM

John Malcolm and R. B. Welliver have joined hands in the grain business with Messrs. Strong and Dowler, of Calgary, an old established firm of that city.

The local representatives will have a very large territory to organize and take care of, as it extends from Innisfail north to Blackfalds, and from Rocky Mountain House east to the Saskatchewan boundary.

The Red Deer office will be in Mr. Welliver's present office. Phone 109. They will be buying in car-load lots mainly.

They are placing a number of grain loading elevators at some of the best sidings, and are also open to give buying contracts to energetic men who have motor cars and can give their whole time to the work.

Some excellent districts are now available. Government grading and weighing will be the regulations, with top prices on date of purchase.

Get prices and information at any time at Mr. Welliver's office.
